Whereas Francis archbishop of Dublin, now deceased, by petition set forth, that by the Act of Settlement so much of the then forfeited lands as were anciently the right of inheritance of the see of Dublin, but granted in fee-farm by the former archbishops of that see, under the reservation of a chief-rent to the then forfeiting persons, or those under whom they claimed, were appointed to be sett out in augmentation to the said see, as would compleat the revenue thereof to the sum of 2,000*l.* per ann.; and that pursuant thereunto, the commissioners for executing the said Acts did sett out to the then archbishop, and his successors, several lands, part whereof, viz. Seatowne, Newtowne, Blackhall, Gamwell Smith's land, and several other lands and tenements in and about Swords, containing together 437 A. the former propriety of Christopher Russell, whose son, Bartholomew Russell, being by the said commissioners decreed innocent, was left to recover by law his right, if any he had, in remainder after his father's death, which lands were not passed in patent with other augmentation lands as intended by the said Acts, but were by order of the said commissioners granted to the then archbishop in custodium, at the quit-rent of 15*l.*, until the said Bartholomew's pretence should be determined, and that tho' his father died in 1682, yet he never brought his pretence to a determination until 1688, when the late Earl of Tyrconnell was chief governor, and Popish judges sat upon the benches who gave judgment in his favour, though the prime serjeant and solicitor general had given their opinion to the court, that he was not justly entitled thereto, but that the lands belonged to the crown to the uses of the said Acts of Settlement, by which judgment so obtained the archbishop was dispossessed by the said Bartholomew, who continued in possession until the reduction of Ireland, when he died in actual rebellion, and stood indicted and outlawed, and thereby forfeited his title in remainder, if any he had. The said archbishop therefore prayed the king to grant to him and his successors the said premises at the quit-rent of 15*l.* per ann. as he formerly held the same, but he deceasing before the king's directions arrived in Ireland, that favour was granted to his successor Dr. Narcessus Marsh, by this patent, pursuant to privy seal, dated at Whitehall, 13th July 1694; viz. the castle, town, and lands of Seatowne, 215 A.; rent, 4*l.* 7*s.* 0*d.*; Newtowne at Knockmole, 90 A.; rent, 1*l.* 16*s.* 5*d.*—Black Hall, 117 A.—rent, 2*l.* 7*s.* 4*d.*—Gamwell Smith's Land, Ferry Park, Campionfield, and several other lands and tenements in and about Swords, 69 A. 2 R.; rent, 1*l.* 8*s.* 1*d.*—Total, 9*l.* 18*s.* 11*d.*; bar.
